PHOENIX, Sept. 13, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- Troxell, a national leader in education technology & collaboration solutions for more than 60 years, is happy to announce the addition of Wayne Lawson as an Account Executive in the state of Nevada. He will work closely with school districts throughout Nevada to bring best-in-class, innovative technology to the classroom.

"I am personally very excited to join the Troxell team," said Wayne Lawson. "Having worked on a large 1:1 initiative with the state of Nevada, bringing new technology to schools, I look forward to drawing from my experience in innovative solutions to enhance the learning experience for students of all ages."

"We are excited to welcome Wayne to the Troxell family in this growing region we serve," said Mark Barber, Troxell's Sr. Vice President of Sales. "He has a wealth of knowledge and experience in providing innovative technology to educators with the goal of giving students the opportunities and resources to succeed in the future. Wayne's advocacy of technology in the classroom will serve his districts well in his role as Account Executive."

Wayne Lawson has nineteen years of experience as an educator who worked within the field of educational technologies. In the past ten years, he has been involved in bringing innovative technology to the Clark County School District. In his last position, Wayne worked with the state on a 1:1 project through the Nevada Ready Program. His expertise is in blending learning and STEM/STEAM curriculum. Wayne has been an advocate of using effective technologies in the classroom since the start of his career. His favorite quote, by Jaime Casap, serves as inspiration for the job at hand: "Don't ask students what they want to be when they grow up, but what problems do they want to solve."

You may contact Wayne Lawson at his office phone: 702-659-6136, his mobile phone: 702-540-5237, or send him an email at wayne.lawson@trox.com.
